

Discover the magic of Aloe Vera

For thousands of years our ancestors have known about the remedial benefits of Aloe Vera. Whilst many of the components have been identified, the synergistic effects cannot be fully quantified, and the plant has regularly referred to as "Holistic Medicine".

What has been proven is that the Aloe Vera plants leaf includes many of the vital ingredients required to sustain animal life. Whilst the inner leaf contains all the components of the Aloe, processing the whole leaf adds to the quality to maximise the benefits. Today's technology allows the processing of the whole leaf with the filtration of the stabilised raw product which eliminates the bitter tasting Aloin.

One of the fundamental cores of any biological system is its defence mechanism, with a built-in facility to protect or destroy damaged cells and encourage the renewal of healthy cells, known as the 'immune system'.

In normal circumstances the body naturally copes with the ever-required production of white cells. However today's busy lifestyles and the increased pollution of our environment means our bodies must work harder to fight infection and keep functioning at optimum ability.

We know that we can assist the body by increasing vitamin and mineral intake. Public awareness of the stresses we place on our bodies through modern living has made us ever more eager to find ways to sustain and maintain our bodies balance.

Extensive clinical trials have found that Aloe Vera has antiseptic, anti-fungal and anti-bacterial properties and can also help with inflammation. It also dilates the capillaries to increase blood flow. It helps break down food in the stomach and improve the digestive process. It enhances white and red blood cell reproduction, which in turn stimulates the immune defence and tissue regeneration.
